Allied Military Mail, American Printing, Offset Lithography, Perforated 10¾

Allied Military Mail, British Printing, Photogravure, Perforated 14½ to 14¾

American and British printing differ, first of all, in terms of printing method (offset lithography and photogravure, respectively). However, the easiest way to distinguish them is by examining the perforation. The German printing, on the other hand, has additional ornament fields, unlike both the Britsh and American printing (see illustration). All values higher than 25 Pfennig are exclusively found in German printing.

Specialized collectors also differentiate between different types of paper in these issues.

Leipzig Spring Fair 1947, Copper Engraving ('Leipzig Printing')

Likewise, Steel Engraving ('Berlin Printing', 1948)

In steel engraving, the lines are finer and have clearer contours compared to copper engraving (see illustrations). The Leipzig printing of these stamps has the following perforation variations: line 13, line 13¼, comb 13¼, and line 13¼:13 (only 24 + 24 Pf.), while the Berlin printing has only the perforation variation comb 13¼:13.

Specialized collectors also distinguish the degree to which the watermark steps descend or ascend.

For the other stamp issues related to the Leipzig Fair in the same design (Joint Issues, Soviet Zone, and GDR), such variations in printing method, perforation and watermark do not occur.

The reprints for the denominations of 5 Pf, 10 Pf, 15 Pf, and 20 Pf [arc of compass to the right] were created from the original printing plate of Type II, with retouching to restore Type I. This resulted in irregular patterns of the circular arc. The reprints of the denominations 12 Pf, 20 Pf [arc of compass to the left], 25 Pf, 30 Pf, 40 Pf, 50 Pf, and 70 Pf are visually identical to the original prints.
