Rhodesia And Nyasaland

The Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland was a semi-independent state in southern Africa that existed from 1 August 1953 to the end of 1963, comprising the former British colony of Southern Rhodesia and the Northern Rhodesia and Nyasaland protectorates.

It was also known by the alternative title of the Central African Federation (CAF). It was a federal realm of the British Crown (not a colony, but yet not a dominion though theBritish Sovereign was represented by a governor-general, which is usual for dominions).It was intended to eventually become a dominion within the Commonwealth of Nations.

The Federation collapsed (officially on 31 December 1963), when Northern Rhodesia gained independence from the United Kingdom as the new nation of Zambia and Nyasaland gained independence as the new nation of Malawi.
The remaining territory, Southern Rhodesia, became known simply as Rhodesia and is now Zimbabwe

The Flag of the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasalandwas a defaced British Blue Ensign Centered in the fly of the flag was a depiction of the shield from the Federation's Coat of Arms.
The rising sun is taken from the Arms of Nyasaland (now Malawi),
The lion rampant is taken from the Arms of Southern Rhodesia (now Zimbabwe), and the black and white wavy lines is taken from the Arms of Northern Rhodesia (now Zambia).
In this form, it accurately shows the Federation of all three British Colonies which lasted from 1953 to December 31, 1963.
This flag flew alongside the Union Jack for the duration of the existance of the Federation.
