Steppe Flowers

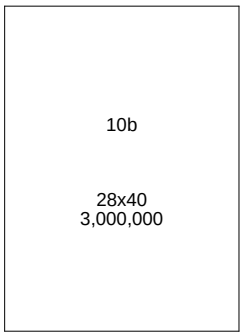

Released: 25-February-1970 - Perf: 13½ - Designer: Ion Druga

In physical geography, a steppe is an ecoregion characterized by grassland plains without trees apart from those near rivers and lakes. Steppe biomes may include the montane ("high altitude") grasslands and shrublands biome or the temperate grasslands, savannas and shrublands biome. Steppes are usually characterized by a semi-arid or continental climate. Extremes temperatures range from up to 45 °C (115 °F) in the summer to -55 °C (-67 °F) in winter. Besides the major seasonal difference, fluctuations between day and night are also very great. The world's largest steppe region, often referred to as "The Great Steppe", is found in Eastern Europe and Central Asia.

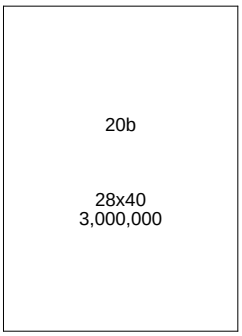

A Must Visit: The commune of Zau de Campie lies in the heart of the Transylvanian Plateau, approximately 60 kilometers east of Cluj-Napoca. Known as the open country of Transylvania, home to vast fields of agricultural lands dotted by fishing ponds and sparsely-inhabited villages. At first glance, it’s your typical country landscape with nothing special to it. However, in reality, for 10 days each Spring, it is home to one of the most stunning and unique flower shows in all of Romania. Nestled between the hills situated at the periphery of the village, a small natural reserve protects the stunning Paeonia tenuifolia flower species, known as the “steppe peony”, also called the fine-leaved peony or narrow peony in other lands. The reservation was established back in 1932 by Alexandru Borza, one of the founding fathers of the Romanian school of botany. Since then, has been maintained, expanded and cared for by hard-working locals, who recognized the importance and the uniqueness of the reserve and fought hard to include it in the official heritage list of the Romanian Academy.

Released: 26-May-1970 - Perf: 13½ - Designer: Aurel Popescu

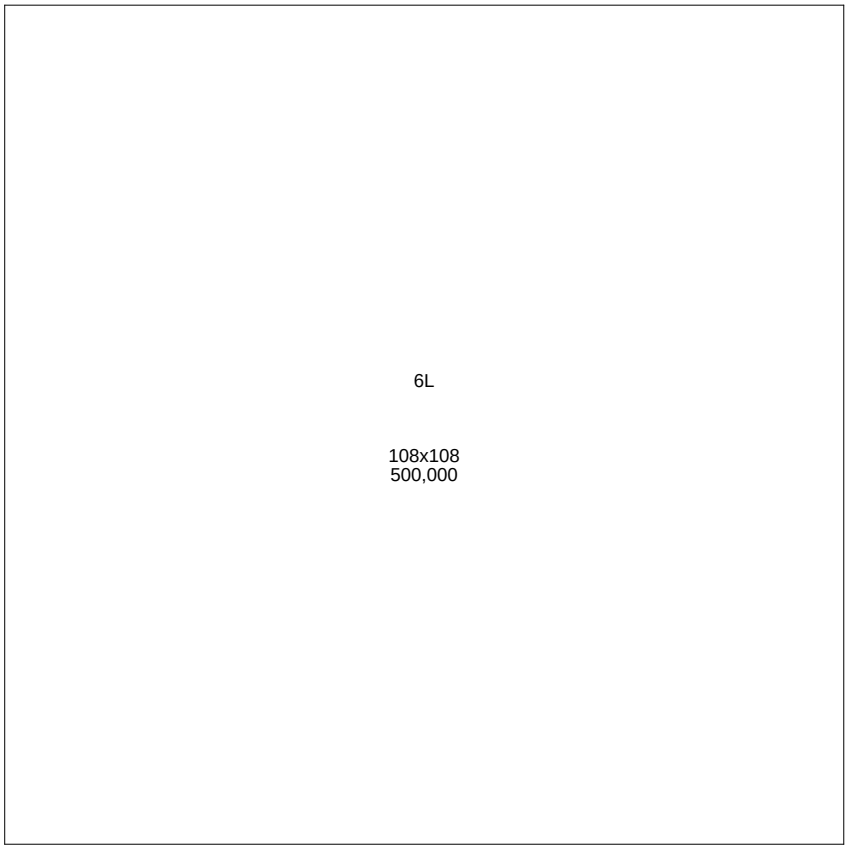

This was the 9th edition of the World Cup, an international Football tournament held every four years for men's senior national teams. This event was held from 31 May to 21 June in Mexico, it was the first World Cup tournament staged in North America, and the first held outside Europe and South America. Teams representing 75 nations from all six populated continents entered the competition. In May of 1968, the qualification rounds began. Fourteen teams qualified from this process to join host nation Mexico and defending champions England in the 16-team final tournament. El Salvador, Israel and Morocco made their debut appearances at the final stage. The tournament was won by Brazil, who defeated another former two-time world champion, and current 1968 European champion Italy, by 4–1 in the final. This victory awarded Brazil its third World Cup title, allowing them to permanently keep the Jules Rimet Trophy, and a new trophy was introduced in 1974.

The 1970 floods in Romania were the worst in modern Romanian history, caused by river swelling induced by torrential rainfall, high winds, and a heat wave that melted snow in the Carpathian Mountains. The floods began around mid-May and lasted into mid-June. 209 people were killed, and 41,000 houses were damaged or totally destroyed (leaving at least 265,000 homeless). Over a million acres were inundated, with over 100,000 sheep, pigs, cows and chickens drowned. 146 factories were idled at least temporarily, and over 250 miles (400 km) of highway required repair. At least 240,000 people were evacuated, some repeatedly. 37 of Romania's then 39 counties were severely damaged, with 230 towns and villages hit in just the first twelve days, including Sighisoara and Medias. Airports, including those at Sibiu and Satu Mare, were flooded and closed. Railway systems were damaged, and landslides blocked roads. Significant resources were mobilized to fight the waters and their effects. Medical teams toured most areas of the country, urging people not to drink polluted water (many drinking water installations were destroyed) and inoculating all citizens aged 2 to 55 against typhoid fever. Thousands of soldiers and civilians worked around the clock to build miles of new dikes and reinforce old ones.

The Neoclassical style structure, built in Bucharest's "Old Historical Center" from 1894 to 1900, was designed by architect Alexandru Savulescu, who was heavily influenced by the postal facility in Geneva. Originally served as the headquarters of the postal service, until it was relocated in 1970. The museum, which had 60 exhibit rooms spread across four levels, first opened its doors in 1972. One of the permanent exhibits, "Historical Treasure" (located on the lower level) hosts some of the most representative items for Romania's history. Among the more than three-thousand items on display, is jewelry from the Geto-Dacians and the current Romanian Crown Jewels.

This series highlights some of Romania's beautiful rare and protected species of flowers. First in the series is the wild Peony from Dobrogea (Paeonia peregrina romanica), which can be found in the souteastern part of Romania, in the Macin mountains. The Alpine Pink (Dianthus Callizonus) is referred to as the little carnation of Piatra Craiului. This protected species is only found in Piatra Craiului Mountains. The Edelwiess is a mountain flower that can be found in the Romanian Carpathian Mountains. This flower has many symbolic uses in various areas, from military and commercial to monetary and tourism, becoming a quite popular flower despite being rare and hard to reach. In Romanian it's called floare de colt, but is also known as floarea reginei (the queen’s flower).

The Red Vanilla Orchid (Nigritella Rubra) is one of the rarest flowers in Romania. A fragrant blackish-purple vanilla orchid that blooms in July, in the north-eastern part of the Carpathian Mountains in Romania (Suceava county). The Narcissus (Narcissus Stellaris) white daffodil is a rare fragrant bulb that blooms in the spring. Marked as a rare species in Romania, a protected area was established for them at the Negrasi Daffodil Meadow in Arges County in Muntenia. Lady's Slipper Orchid (Cypripedium calceolus) is considered an endangered species in most countries. In Romania one location that you might find this beauty is near the Cluj-Napoca area in the Garbaului Valley.

500th Birthday of Nicolaus Copernicus

Nicolaus Copernicus (1473-1543) Astronomer

Nicolaus Copernicus (1473-1543) was a Polish astronomer known as the father of modern astronomy, credited with several discoveries that profoundly changed our understanding of the universe. Copernicus was a well-trained scholar, he studied mathematics at the University of Cracow and studied canon law and astronomy at the University of Bologna. Copernicus became a cleric and was named Canon of the cathedral at Frauenburg at the age of 24, then took leave to lecture in Rome and to resume his studies. He went on to earn a degree in canon law at the University of Ferrara in 1503, and studied practical medicine at the University of Padua. Copernicus was also published economist, Monetae cudendae ratio (1526). In 1517 Copernicus became the first person to clearly detail the "Quantitative Theory of Money", the theory that prices of goods and services vary directly to the supply of money in circulation. One of Copernicus' achievements in astronomy that significantly reshaped our understanding of our solar system was his work on the Heliocentric (sun-centered) System in 1514.Copernicus described this in his written work, Commentariolus (Latin for "Small Commentary").
Copernicus' theories created controversy and resulted in his worked being condemned as heretical by the Roman Catholic Church because it removed Earth and humanity from their central position in the universe. On May 22, 2010 Copernicus' remains were blessed with holy water and reburied in a tomb by a Polish Priest as a hero.

300th Birth Anniversary of Dimitri Cantemir (1673-1723) Scientist & Writer

Released: 25-June-1973 - Perf: 13½

Dimitri Cantemir was born on 26-October-1673 in Salisteni, Moldavia (now located in Vaslui County, Romania). Dimitri was the son of Constantin Cantemir, a mercenary of peasant origin, who later became Prince of Bogdan. Upon his father's death in March 1693, young Dimitri became the Prince of Bogdan instead of his older brother Antioh, who was the legal heir. Dimitri's rule lasted only three weeks, however, because of the opposition, intrigue and the large amounts of money spent by the Wallachian Prince Constantin Brancoveanu. Dimitri decided to return to Istanbul, where he studied at the Academy of the Ecumenical Patriarchate. Dimitri also studied Turkish, Turkish music, and tanbur (a fretted string instrument of Turkey and the former lands of the Ottoman Empire). Dimitri's fame as an excellent tanburi not only won him access to the households of high-ranking officials but also enabled him to entertain his friends at his palace in Ortakoy. Dimitri, was also interested in art collecting, painting, and architecture. He drew plans for several churches in Russia where he took refuge after 1711. During Dimitri's second term (1710-1711) he allied his state with Russia in a war against Moldavia's Ottoman overlords; Russia's defeat forced Cantemir's family into exile. Dimitri was also a prolific writer, a philosopher, historian, composer, musicologist, linguist, ethnographer, and geographer. His son Antioch, Russia's ambassador to Great Britain and France, and a friend of Montesquieu and Voltaire, would become known as "the father of Russian poetry".

The Pietroasele Treasure (or the Petrossa Treasure), is the name given to a hoard of gold artifacts discovered in 1837 in an ancient grave in Pietroasele, Buzau County, Romania. The treasure was discovered by two peasants from the village of Pietroasele, Ion Lemnaru and his father-in-law Stan Avram while cutting limestone in a quarry for the building of a bridge. The gold artifacts have been dated to the Gothic period. Of the twenty-two pieces, only twelve have survived, and they are hosted at the National Museum of Romanian History, in Bucharest.

Page_VSpace(-1) The Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE) was a key element of the detente process during the Cold War. Although it did not have the powers of a treaty, it recognized the boundaries of postwar Europe and established a mechanism for minimizing political and military tensions between East and West and improving human rights in the Communist bloc. The document was signed in Helsinki Finland on August 1, 1975 by 33 European nations, the United States and Canada. It is often called the Helsinki Agreement. In 1994, the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) was established as a successor to CSCE.

An Impressionist and Realist painter, and considered the founder of modern Romanian painting. Ion Andreescu was born 15 February 1850, in Bucharest. Andreescu attended Theodor Aman's National School of Fine Arts (now known as the Bucharest National University of Arts). By 1872, he was an instructor of drawing and calligraphy at the Bishop's School in Buzau. In 1873 he left the Bishop's School for the Tudor Vladimirescu Communal Secondary School where he remained for two years. Influenced by Nicolae Grigorescu, he left Romania for Paris to further his education. He began attending the private arts school Academie Julian and at the same time he was accepted at the Salon (Paris). He then moved to Barbizon, where he mastered plein-air painting. His work was exhibited with the works of painters such as Edouard Manet, Claude Monet and Pierre-Auguste Renoir. In 1881 Andreescu returned to Romania, ill with tuberculosis. His death followed shortly on 22 October 1882.

Vaslui Battle

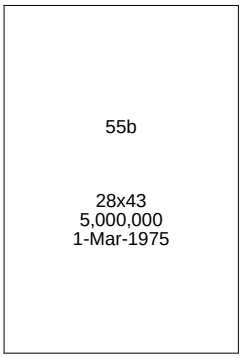

Released: 8-Feb-1975 - Perf: 13¼

The Battle of Vaslui (also referred to as the Battle of Podul Inalt or the Battle of Racova) was fought on 10 January 1475, between Stephen III of Moldavia and the Ottoman Governor of Rumelia, Hadim Suleiman Pasha. The battle took place at Podul Inalt (the High Bridge), near the town of Vaslui, in Moldavia (now part of eastern Romania). The Ottoman troops numbered up to 120,000, facing about 40,000 Moldavian troops. Stephen inflicted a decisive defeat on the Ottomans, with casualties, according to Venetian and Polish records reaching beyond 40,000 on the Ottoman side. Mara Brankovic (Mara Hatun), the former younger wife of Murad II, told a Venetian envoy that the invasion had been the worst ever defeat for the Ottomans. Stephen was later awarded the title "Athleta Christi" (Champion of Christ) by Pope Sixtus IV, who referred to him as "verus christianae fidei athleta" (The true defender of the Christian faith).

Released: 15-Feb-1976 - Perf: 13¼ - Designer: Rodica Cateanu

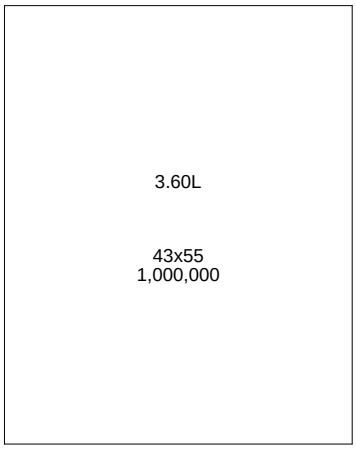

Constantin Brancusi was born February 19, 1876, in the village of Hobitza, located in Romania's Carpathian Mountains. He studied art at the Scoala de Meserii (School of Arts and Crafts) in Craiova from 1894 to 1898 and at the Scoala Natzionala de Arte Frumoase (National School of Fine Arts) in Bucharest from 1898 to 1902. A contemporary sculptor, Brancusi created various castings and carvings in stone and wood guided by his simple principle - what is real, is not the appearance, but the idea, the essence of things. Brancusi's recognizable style is graceful in its basic, primordial forms, notable in his works such as "The Kiss" (1910) and "Bird" (1940). Brancusi focused on organic motifs as well as the art and folklore of Cycladic, African, and Romanian cultures throughout his successful career. He was also influenced by legendary sculptors such as Richard Serra and Isamu Noguchi. Brancusi died in 1957 and was buried in Paris. In 1962, a few years after his death, his "Bird in Space" became the inspiration for the Clio Art Award statuette.

Note: Crisana refers to a geographical and historical region in north-western Romania, named after the Cris River and its three tributaries: the Crisul Alb, Crisul Negru, and Crisul Repede.
Banat is a geographical and historical region straddling between Central and Eastern Europe that is currently divided among three countries: the eastern part lies in western Romania (the counties of Timis, Caras-Severin, Arad south of the Mures river, and the western part of Mehedinti); the western part in northeastern Serbia; and a small northern part lies within southeastern Hungary.
Tibiscum was a Dacian settlement, then a city in Roman Dacia, and as a municipality during the reign of Emperor Gallienus (253-268). The town was located at the exit of the Timis River from the mountains and the mouth of the Bistra River, near Caransebes, today the village of Jupa, Caras-Severin County.

Nicolaie Grigorescu was born May 15,1838, in Pitaru, Dambovita, Romania. After his father's death in 1843, he moved to Bucharest with his mother and siblings, where he soon began an apprenticeship with the Czech miniaturist and icon painter Anton Chladek. In 1861, he moved from Romania to Paris on a scholarship to attend Ecole des Beaux-Arts. While studying abroad, he was exposed to the Impressionist movement and began adopting the style into his works. Grigorescu is considered the founder of modern Romanian painting and a role model for the following generations of artists, who have wholeheartedly embraced his unique values of Romanian spirituality.

Tattarescu was born in Foscani in 1818. He began as an apprentice to his uncle Nocolae Teordescu, a church painter; then studied at the Painting School from Buzau. Tattarescu was a participant in the 1848 Revolution in Wallachia. Afterwards, Tattarescu painted portrait of Romanians revolutionaries in exile. In 1864, together with painter Theodor Aman, Tattarescu founded the National School of Fine Arts in Bucharest, where he was a professor for many years, and served as Headmaster for two years (1891-1892). Tattarescu died in Bucharest. The house he bought in 1855 and lived in for almost 40 years is now home to the Gheorghe Tattarescu Memorial Museum. It was opened 1951, and hosts several of his original works of art.
