United States
Non-Machineable Rate Issues

The United States Postal Service relies on automated machinery to process mail, and therefore that mail must have certain physical characteristics. While still mailable, letters that don't meet these criteria are considered "non-machineable", and incur additional postage charges. Because of their common design theme, these stamps are often referred to as "the Butterfly Stamps".

2010
Monarch

2012
Baltimore Checkerspot

2013
Spicebush Swallowtail

2014
Great Spangled Fritillary

2015
Eastern Tiger Swallowtail

2016
Eastern Tailed-Blue

California Dogface

for future use

for future use